I beleive the action being taken by the DoJ is a proper one. Microsoft should allow OEM s to offer whatever packages they deem best for their customers. If Microsoft Middleware is as greate as MS believes it is then natural Free-market should determine that not the locking down of an OS level access. I also content that Microsoft does have a great product for some uses and UNIX is good for other uses but that should be the determination of the end-user not the manufactorer of a product.
